

Harvest of the Heart

Are you among the lucky ones who found a place to grow, with loving guides who cared for you and often told you so.
Did you find a place of warm embrace and a power, O so strong to lift a heart and change the face of a world in need of song.

Refrain: And the seeds we sow we may not reap today,
but down the road we know another life will make its way.
And the truths we share though we be far apart still bind us in the harvest of the heart.

The bible stories, verses learned, still echo through the halls. Somewhere in my memory are songs I still recall sung by those who bravely chose to share the legacy, whose labor's fruits were taking root in places none could see.

Refrain

Who we are and who we'll be is captured in the seed planted well within our hearts by those who knew our need.
Around their circles still we sit. Our faces still remain as flowers in the garden of the harvest we became.

Refrain