

In Our Own Image

By Tom DeFrange

We make ourselves in our own image.
We're the visible results of our desires.
In our values you can find just what God we have enshrined
And the vision to which each of us aspires.
We make our god in our own image,
More by what we do than what we say.
And our given mental state dictates how we will relate
And we need a God who's thinking the same way.

Thus those who feel the need to judge require a god of Judgment.
And those who lack the faith to trust prefer a god of Fear.
And if you're into sentiment, you'll like the god of sorrows.
There's a jealous god for people too intolerant to hear.
For those just apathetic there's the god who doesn't care
Who left us by our own wits to be led.
There's the righteous god for war.
The god of vengeance and what's more.
There's some who would prefer to think He's dead.

But Jesus said we needn't be God-fearing.
God-loving is the only way to be.
For the God He told us of is the God of endless love.
Be ye loving as this God and you will see.
In what image we are really meant to be.

©2014 by Tom DeFrange