

Moments to Invest

There are so many minutes in a day.
There are so many hours in a year.
To each of us allotted are the moments to invest
in what becomes the reason we are here.

And some of us are drifting with the tide
as circumstances push us through the day.
And while we are waiting for our moment to arrive,
the moment of arriving slips away.

Refrain: And moments that became our yesterdays
while we were looking forward to tomorrow,
are the treasures that were lost
when we failed to see the cost of banking on the time we could not borrow.

And you are still the owner of your life,
And your's is the direction that you choose.
You represent a resource that's been given to the world
With each passing moment that you use.

And what we discover in the end,
after all that we have gathered with our cares
is that the purpose of our lives is not the goals that we've achieved, but whether we helped others to reach theirs. Refrain

There are so many minutes in a day.
There are so many hours in a year.
To each of us allotted are the moments to invest
in what becomes the reason we are here.