

You and I

The roaring of the water, the calming of the sea,
I see the changes coming slowly for you and for me.
Adversity always brings a sting of pain to remind
That our love is bound together by the cross of truth He bore.
My prayer will always be for you, before my soul.

The joyfulness of knowing when my past was just a shell
You knew the love that she had for me was in your hands.
At your command it rested within my lover's heart.
And now that we're together I know I'll keep on finding
That love is so much more than being kind, being kind.

And resting in God's presence, we'll drink the cup of joy,
We've drunk the cup of sorrow fully so we'll share each other's road.
And living in the Spirit of Christ's love for his church
What I have is yours, what is yours is mine,
Giving love the kind that never dies
You and I, you and I.

Time is flowing swiftly down the current of our dream to eternity.

©2016 by Patrick Hanna