

FUTURE

Marilyn DeFrangé

I spend my time thinking about tomorrow.
But I'm not having any fun today.
Time's running out. There's no more left to borrow.
I'm getting tired living this way.

I'm pinching pennies, I'm saving dimes.
So I can spend them at a later time.
As for today, I'm doing nothing special.
Why do I do it? I don't ask me why.

Living in the future, is it really worth it?
Hey, what's the point in it?

You know it's way too early for the radio at six o'clock this morning.
Another day that I don't spend for me.
And then it's gone gone. It leaves without a warning.
Another day I don't get what I need.

Living in the future, is it really worth it?
Hey, what's the point in it?

I don't want to be living in the future.
I'd much rather be living for the day.
Living in the future, is it really worth it?
Living in the future, is it really worth it?
